

Ionic Conductors

Abstract

Electrochemical devices, whatever they are, rely on the use of ionically conducting membranes which can be based on either inorganic or polymeric membranes. Such a research field is nowadays getting great momentum owing to the growing interest for the development of solid state batteries. Besides, ceramic membranes could facilitate the development of both Li-air and Li-S batteries.